

WHAT IS REAL BEER?

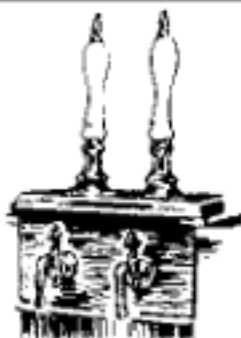

WHAT IS REAL BEER! beer brewed only from malted barley and hops, without special ingredients and flavouring. It is not pasteurised or filtered and leaves the brewery in its natural state still fermenting.
Gas pressure, widespread in this area, prevents fermenting and distorts the taste.

How the beer gets to your glass...

Gravity

WOOD OR METAL BARREL ON OR BEHIND BAR PLACE GLASS UNDER TAP AND TURN.

Beer Engine

HAND PUMP ON BAR SUCKING BEER UP FROM CELLAR BELOW. MOST COMMON IN LONDON

Electric Pump

RARE IN LONDON BUT MOST COMMON IN MIDLANDS AND NORTH. AN ELECTRIC MOTOR PROVIDES THE EFFORT NOT GAS.

Pressure Pump

PRESSURE PUMP ALWAYS GIVES GASSY BEER. RECOGNISABLE BY GARISH BAR FITTINGS AND SMALL HANDLE OR PUSH BUTTON. GUARANTEES NON TRADITIONAL BEER

Protect Your Pint!

How do you like your beer? Fizzy and cold from a fancy bar mounting, with a false foaming head instead of flavour? Or do you prefer it as it used to be brewed with the smack of malt and hops, and served without unnatural gas?

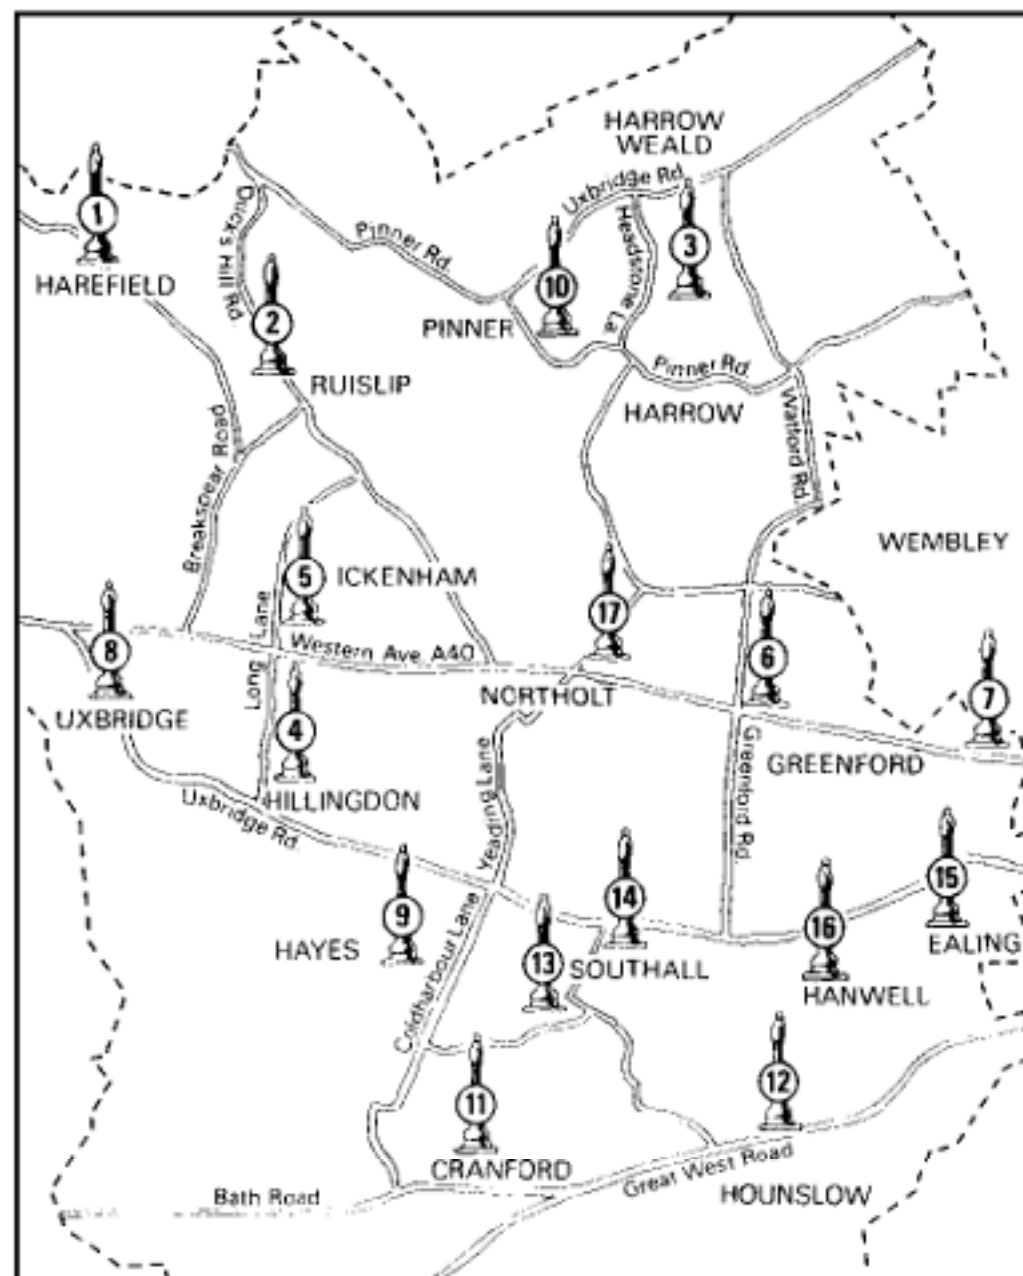

You're lucky if you've still got a choice - in some parts of the country, true draught beer is just a memory. The big brewers are bent on phasing it out wherever they can. They're replacing it with pressurised, tank and keg beers, advertised to the tune of millions of pounds a year, and are curiously reluctant to admit the public demand for real draught.

Fortunately, all is not lost. CAMRA, the Campaign for Real Ale, a flourishing organisation with a nationwide membership and a network of local branches, is looking after the interests of the drinker who wants a traditional pint in traditional surroundings. A number of breweries have already begun to take notice and the signs are that more will follow if the campaign continues to bite.
